Barriers to Cervical Screening Experienced by Victim/Survivors of Sexual Assault – Pilot Study (2002)	This is a report on the pilot phase of research into the barriers to cervical screening experienced by victim/survivors of sexual assault. It considers the question of whether victim/survivors may be underscreened and therefore at greater risk of cervical cancer and gives consideration of women's experience of, and access to, healthcare in the long term.	CASA House 9635 3600
Breaking the Silence: A Guide to Supporting Adult Victim/Survivors of Sexual Assault 2nd Edition (1995)	Breaking the Silence contains substantial sections on the social context of sexual assault, common myths which surround sexual assault, a framework for effectively supporting adults who have been sexually assaulted, medical care, the law and sexual assault and community resources.	CASA House 9635 3600
Crucial Timing video	The video tells the story of a victim/survivor of sexual assault who is brought by the Police to CASA House's Crisis Care Unit where she meets a Counsellor/Advocate. An eight-page booklet of viewing guidelines accompanies the video package. The guidelines have been prepared to provide workers with the best available knowledge on working with victim/survivors of sexual assault.	CASA House 9635 3600
Cultural Diversity & Services Against Sexual Violence: A Report from the national Association of Services Against Sexual Violence (NASASV) (2002)		CASA House 9635 3600
Emergency Medical Response DVD		CASA House 9635 3600
Just tokens? A Report on the Experience of Victim/Survivors of Sexual Assault when Making Application for Crimes Compensation (1997)	"Just tokens?" places on public record the experience of victim/survivors of sexual assault when seeking compensation under the Victorian Criminal Injuries Compensation Act of 1983. It documents the experiences of victim/survivors through inclusion of both Crimes Compensation Tribunal data and anecdotal material. The report found that crimes compensation was central to the State having a 'discreet responsibility for establishing a focus on the injury and loss imposed on the victim'.	CASA House 9635 3600
Right to Party Safely: A report on young women, sexual violence & licensed premises		CASA House 9635 3600

Sexual Assault: A Resource Book for students (1993)	This book is an excellent source of information on sexual assault, written using a socio-political framework which: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • provides comprehensive information to students for their work requirements (of particular value to those enrolled in Legal Studies) • provides practical information for those within the school community who are the victims of sexual assault. The primary target of this booklet is secondary school students; however it is also of use to students undertaking tertiary studies.	CASA House 9635 3600
Sexual Assault Prevention Program for Secondary Schools (SAPPSS) Report	This report describes the development and evaluation of the CASA House Sexual Assault Prevention Program for Secondary Schools (SAPPSS). It is intended to be used as a summary and a guide for organisations wishing to initiate, develop, monitor and evaluate school-based violence prevention programs and other initiatives focused on young people and their communities. It may also be of use to policy and decision-makers in the sectors of health, education and violence against women.	CASA House 9635 3600
Speaking the Unspeakable: Nature, incidence & prevalence of sexual assault in Victoria (1999)	During 1998 CASA House, for the Victorian CASA Forum, conducted a research project into the nature incidence and prevalence of sexual assault in Victoria. This report describes the findings of that project. It describes the nature and consequences of sexual assault perpetrated against Victorian women and men. The particular strength of this study lies in its reporting about the experience of sexual violence by those with the most authentic voice from which to speak about this experience: the victims and the survivors.
